Mi Pueblo distributes 2nd bilingual directory throughout San Antonio

By Jason P. Olivarri

For the second year in a row, Mi Pueblo began distributing its bi-lingual yellow pages Thursday beginning with area Culebra Meat Markets serving the Hispanic community.

Roy Mendoza, a spokesperson with Mi Pueblo, said that with the changing demographics and advertising in San Antonio, for the longest time all-English directories excluded a large and growing percentage of the city population. In response to this, Leroy Rosas, an ex-SBC yellow pages executive, created a completely bi-lingual, easy to use business directory. This concept quickly blossomed into a successful family business.

Within this bi-cultural publication, each ad in and of itself is delivered in both English and Spanish.

"This makes our directory the only directory that is user-friendly for the entire population of San Antonio," Mendoza said.

As far as their long-term goals with this bilingual directory, Mendoza hopes its existence will start bridging that gap between businesses that want to reach the entire community and the entire population of San Antonio.

"We're not here to argue the fact whether you should speak English or Spanish, we're just trying to service that need that there is a growing population that wants to be spoken to, the Hispanic population, wants to be spoken to in both an English and Spanish format," he said.

Mi Pueblo Yellow Pages, now in its second edition, is currently being distributed throughout the city as well as all Culebra Meat Markets. And or your last name is Castro, you can pick up our book and utilize it," he said. For more information on Mi Pueblo, log onto www.mipueblotx.com.

Enough About High School Football!!!

The Football Tab will cover that topic pretty well this week. Now I want to talk about professional football.

You won't find a bigger Dallas Cowboys fan than myself. I absolutely despised Terrell Owens. When I found out he would be playing with a star on the side of his helmet—I suddenly became a more solemn and forgiving man.

So what if he desecrated the Star on the 50-yard line when he was a member of the 49'rs.

So what if he was arguably the worst teammate to ever put on a Philadelphia Eagles uniform.

So what I said—he is now a Cowboy!!!

I have a great relationship with my mother in law Paula Evans. Believe it or not—the only time we are at odds is when we discuss various sports topics. She told me when the Cowboys signed T.O. there would be problems—so much so that we placed a wager on the matter. I signed T.O. and an honest

Nothing major—just a cooking of dinner for the loser. She said he will be a bad teammate and cause more harm than good—and I said—no way. Not this time—he's learned his lesson!

Wow—how could I be so wrong about the situation. I am now taking classes in anticipation of the Chicken Tetrazini. I will be cooking for mi suegra. I hear it's all in the glaze.

T.O. has been like a toothache that just keeps coming back. Sometimes—it feels ok—but most of the time it just aggravates the heck out of you. So how do you fix a tooth ache? I am guessing drilling it won't work—but will yanking it out do the trick?

After investing a significant amount of money on Owens—they would be yanking out one heck of a tooth. Arguably, one of the biggest Cowboy flops in team history. I am still holding out hope this is all just a phase and he will turn into the great teaming out hope mate Jerry Jones, Bill Parcells and myself envisioned.

I guess I shouldn't hold my breath. Looks like my rival eye dinner won't be getting cooked anytime this season.
