Somos Una Tradición Familiar

As the jury read its verdict Friday, Kearns-DeWalt stood with a blank expression. Her lip quivered slightly when she realized she had not been granted probation as she and her family had hoped. Her father, Edward Kearns, said he was "devastated" by the verdict.

Kearns-DeWalt has served eight months of her sentence and will be eligible for parole in two years. The jury could have given her life.

Edward Kearns said the family is resolved to appeal the case. "This isn't over. There has been so much reversible error," he said. Both he and his late wife served time in jail for aiding and abetting the kidnapping.

The DeWalt family said they were pleased with the verdict. "Justice was served," said Mike DeWalt, who attended the trial in his Navy uniform.

"It says a message," said DeWalt's mother, Char DeWalt. "Other parents are going to think twice before they do something like this. We don't want another little boy to go through what Jeremy went through."

In the sentencing phase of the trial, the prosecution tried to portray Kearns-DeWalt as a psychologically imbalanced, manipulative mother and ex-wife who abuse in an effort to gain full custody of her son.

The defense sought to show that regardless of whether or not Jeremy's father molested him, Kearns-DeWalt had good reason to believe he had, and made the fatal but understandable mistake of escaping with her son when she faced losing him to his father.

In the sentencing phase of the trial, the jury heard the details of the abuse claims for the first time.

Both the prosecution and the defense showed the jury a series of heart-wrenching videos depicting young Jeremy, who reportedly came back from the trip with his father with a stutter he didn't have before, describing horrible acts of sexual abuse that allegedly occurred on that trip. Both the FBI and the Navy investigated those claims but no charges were brought. Mike DeWalt denied the claims and reportedly passed multiple polygraph tests.

Jeremy, now 9, lives with his father at an unknown location. Kearns-DeWalt, along with members of her family, have been barred from seeing him. He did not testify at the trial.

it back together. The event, now in its second year, is expected to raise up to $10,000. Jodi and Brian Behrens will walk with sons Logan, 2, and Lawson, 1. Walkers may register the morning of the race or in advance at the sports center on Texas 27 or at any Mamacita's.

Restaurant owner Hagi Haghigolam said Behrens' positive outlook persuaded him to sponsor the event. "In this lady holding a grudge, something is trying to do something good for the community," he said.

Meanwhile, Drive Clean Across Texas offers these no-cost ways to save gas:

- Check tire inflation, which can increase gas mileage up to 3 percent.
- Drive the speed limit; driving 70 mph uses 10 percent more fuel than 55 mph.
- Avoid idling your engine.
- Remove unnecessary loads.
- Stop gassing up after the first pump handle click.
- For details and more ideas, go the Web at www.drivecleancrosstexas.org/.

"If each one of us makes just a few small changes to the way we drive and take care of our cars, it can make a big difference in air quality and how much money stays in consumers' pockets," spokesman Richard Goldsmith said.
